Monitor your temperature twice daily for 21 days following your last exposure to the case. Symptoms of concern include: fever > 104 degrees, chills, swollen lymph nodes, and new skin rash. If symptoms develop, self-isolate at home and contact your physician for guidance. If you have no symptoms, you can continue normal daily activities.